

The US Travel Association's Blue Ribbon Panel on Aviation Security: Findings and Recommendations

Roger Dow

- President and Chief Executive Officer of the U.S. Travel Association, the national umbrella organization headquartered in Washington, D.C. that represents all segments of travel and tourism in America, an industry responsible for generating $1.8 trillion in economic output annually.
- Driving force in leading an industry-wide movement for the passage of the Travel Promotion Act, in turn creating the Corporation for Travel Promotion.
- Working closely with the Administration and Congress to implement common sense approaches to our nation's air travel security and screening system to maximize security while making the process less burdensome on the vast majority of travelers, who pose no threat.
- Has served in his present position since 2005.